STANWELL PIPES are hand-made -- each is a work of art. The heart of the very best briar roots is carefully selected, and from this the pipes are carved by hand -- a task which can be performed only by experts of many years practice, because the shaping of the bowls and stems requires the greatest artistic ability.

The making of the mouthpiece is equally important. The mouthpiece of a STANWELL PIPE is turned from the finest ebonite, ground and polished so that even the most fastidious smoker will be enthusiastic about its slender shape.

A hand-made STANWELL PIPE is second to none.

The beautiful characteristic surface, which is a distinctive feature of sandblast STANWELL PIPES, is the result of fine sand being blown, under enormous pressure, against the outside of the bowl. As a result of this process the pipe becomes lighter, the grain of the wood stands out in relief, and no two examples look alike. The smooth polished STANWELL PIPES are of an excellent quality, the bowls of the pipes are carefully selected and meticulously finished so as to bring out the natural beauty of the fine grains of the briar. All STANWELL PIPES possess excellent and valuable smoking qualities.
